* A foreign-language lecturer course and a type of physical education class chosen by the student.

 The list of elective courses proposed by the faculty staff (including their academic scope, class format, and assessment methods), as well as the rules for selecting them

(deadline, minimum and maximum group size), is established and announced to students by the dean no later than 30 April of the preceding academic year. Elective courses are offered in the form of lectures

 The student chooses a specialization that begins in the second semester of studies: American Studies, Asian Studies, or Politics and Policy in Europe. The rules for making this choice

(deadline, minimum and maximum number of students per specialization) are determined and announced to students by the dean no later than 31 December of the year preceding the launch of the specialization.

* The student chooses a bachelor's thesis seminar and the unit within the Faculty of International and Political Studies in which the bachelor's thesis will be completed, from among the units indicated by the dean.

The rules for selecting the seminar (deadline, minimum and maximum number of students in each seminar group) are determined and announced to students by the dean no later than 30 May of the preceding academic year.
